AFTERCARE

Caring for Your Lash Lift

The first 24 hours set your curl. After that, a little daily care keeps your lashes lifted, healthy and soft for 6 to 8 weeks.

YOUR LOGO

WHEN	WHAT'S NORMAL	DO	AVOID
First 24 hours the curl sets	A strong, very curled look that softens in a day or two. Tint may leave a faint shadow on the skin.	Keep lashes completely dry. Sleep on your back. Leave them alone; they're still setting.	Water, steam, showers on your face, sweat, mascara, eye makeup and rubbing your eyes.
Days 2–7 settling in	The curl relaxes into a natural lift. A stray lash or two may point a different way.	Brush lashes up each morning with a clean spoolie. Start a non-prostaglandin lash conditioner.	Oil-based removers or cleansers near eyes, waterproof mascara and lash curlers.
Weeks 2–6 enjoy it	Lift holds well. Tint slowly softens. New, straight lashes start to grow in between.	Water-based mascara only, removed gently. Keep conditioning nightly and brushing daily.	Pulling, picking or tugging at lashes, and harsh scrubs or acids around your eyes.
Weeks 6–8 next lift	The curl grows out with your natural lash cycle. Mixed straight and curled lashes are normal.	Book your next lift and tint. Tell me about any new eye drops, serums or health changes.	Lifting again sooner than 6 weeks, or a home perm kit; both can over-process lashes.

GOOD TO KNOW

- Contacts can go back in today unless eyes feel irritated
- Pools, sauna and steam rooms are fine after 24 hours
- A nourishing lash conditioner keeps lashes soft
- Lash serums with prostaglandins can over-curl lashes
- Chlorine and sun can fade tint a little faster
- Gentle, oil-free eye makeup remover only

Stay dry
No water or steam on lashes for 24 hours.

Skip mascara
For 24 hours, then water-based only.

Oil-free
Oils near eyes can relax the curl.

No curler
Your lift does the work; curlers can snap lashes.

CALL ME RIGHT AWAY IF YOU NOTICE

- Eyelid swelling, itching or a rash
- Discharge, crusting or a gritty feeling
- Redness that gets worse instead of better
- Lashes that feel brittle or are breaking
