AFTERCARE

Caring for Your Cover-Up

Cover-ups use denser lines and more saturated ink, so they can look darker and more raised while they heal. Gentle care gives the new design its best result.

YOUR LOGO

WHEN	WHAT'S NORMAL	DO	AVOID
First day wrap on	More redness, swelling and oozing than usual, from heavier packing.	Wrap off at [2–5] hours. Wash gently with fragrance-free soap. Pat dry.	Re-wrapping, scrubbing, sleeping on it or alcohol tonight.
Days 2–4 dark & raised	Darker and bolder than it will heal. Feels tight, warm or puffy.	Wash [2–3] times a day. A very thin layer of ointment for [3–4] days.	Thick ointment that traps moisture. Tight sleeves or straps.
Days 5–14 peeling	Thicker flakes. The old design may seem to show through.	Thin fragrance-free lotion. Let flakes come off by themselves.	Picking, which can pull out ink. Soaking, swimming, sun.
Weeks 3–6 settling	Color softens into its healed tone. Some spots may need another pass.	Send me a photo at [4–6] weeks. Book any planned session.	Sun and tanning beds. Judging it before it has healed.

While it heals

Heavy saturation sits darker and higher at first, and the old tattoo can peek through as new ink settles. Give it [4–6] weeks before judging the final look; we will check it together.

GOOD TO KNOW

- Cover-ups often need [2] or more sessions
- Fully heal between sessions, usually [4–6] weeks
- Fragrance-free products only; no antibiotic creams
- Laser-faded skin may heal more slowly; tell me
- Old scar tissue can take ink unevenly
- Change sheets tonight; wear loose, clean clothes

Be patient
Darker is normal.

Thin layers
A little goes a long way.

Hands off
Let flakes fall off.

Photo check
A picture at [4–6] weeks.

CALL ME AND SEE A DOCTOR IF YOU NOTICE

- Redness or swelling spreading after day 3
- Yellow or green pus, or a bad smell
- Red streaks, heat or severe throbbing pain
- Fever, chills, a rash, hives or lasting bumps

Any of these: see your doctor, then text me so I can log the ink batch.

Swelling of the face or throat, or trouble breathing: call 911.
