AFTERCARE

After Your Hot Oil Treatment

Warm oil and massage leave your scalp nourished and your shoulders relaxed. Here's what to expect over the next day or two, and how to keep your scalp comfortable.

WHEN	WHAT'S NORMAL	DO	AVOID
Today just after	Hair may feel heavy or oily. Shoulders may feel loose or a little tender.	Rest, and sip water if you like. Sit and stand up slowly after lying back.	Strong sun on an oiled scalp. Hot tools on oily hair.
If left in take-home oil	Hair looks darker and slick until it is washed.	Wash it out within [24] hours. Put an old towel on your pillow.	Your best pillowcase. Styling products on top of the oil.
First wash days 1–2	You may need two shampoos to lift the oil. A few loose hairs shed.	Lukewarm water. Shampoo the scalp twice; condition the ends only.	Very hot water or rough towel-drying.
Next visit every [2–4] weeks	Dryness and tension slowly return between sessions.	Book your next treatment and tell me about any reactions.	Trying new oils at home without a patch test.

GOOD TO KNOW

- Heavy hair for a day is normal and washes out
- Warm oil softens and conditions; it isn't a detox
- Found a nut or fragrance allergy later? Tell me
- Oil can stain fabric; a dark top or scarf helps
- Light soreness after massage usually fades in a day
- Ongoing itching or flaking: see a dermatologist

Wash within [24] h
Took oil home? Shampoo it out by tomorrow.

Shade your scalp
A hat or shade while oil is on your scalp.

Protect fabric
An old towel on your pillow tonight.

Go slow
Sit up and stand slowly after lying back.

CALL ME RIGHT AWAY IF YOU NOTICE

- Itching, hives or a rash on your scalp, face or neck
- Swelling around your hairline, eyes or lips
- Burning, a blister or a sore red spot
- Neck pain, dizziness or a headache that won't settle

Swelling of the lips, face or throat, or trouble breathing: call 911. A rash that spreads or lasts: see your doctor or a dermatologist.
