AFTERCARE

After Lymphatic Drainage

Gentle lymphatic work keeps your body busy for a few hours after you leave. Here's what's normal, what helps, and when to call.

YOUR LOGO

WHEN	WHAT'S NORMAL	DO	AVOID
Today first hours	Needing to urinate more often. Feeling relaxed, sleepy or thirsty.	Drink water and rest. Wear compression exactly as your surgeon advised.	Hot tubs, saunas and heavy exercise. Alcohol tonight.
Days 1–3 settling in	Swelling may ease, then vary day to day. Mild tenderness can happen.	Take gentle walks. Keep incisions clean and dry as your surgeon directs.	Taking compression off early. Pressing or rubbing firm areas yourself.
Ongoing between visits	Changes are gradual. Some days feel puffier than others, especially when warm.	Follow your surgeon's plan. Light movement, rest and regular meals.	Skipping follow-up visits with your surgeon or doctor.
[Interval] next visit	Sessions are often booked as a series. Results vary for everyone.	Book as planned. Tell me about new symptoms, medications or surgeon advice.	Waiting it out if swelling suddenly gets worse. Call instead.

After surgery

Your surgeon's instructions come first. If anything on this page differs from what your surgeon told you, follow your surgeon and let me know so we can adjust your sessions.

GOOD TO KNOW

- Extra bathroom trips are normal and expected
- This work moves fluid; it doesn't "flush toxins"
- Raising your legs can ease leg swelling
- The pressure is light on purpose; deeper isn't better
- Garments should feel snug, never painful or numbing
- Results build over a series and vary person to person

Rest up
Give your body a quiet few hours after.

Sip water
Thirst after a session is common.

Keep moving
Short, gentle walks help fluid move.

Garment on
Wear compression as your surgeon advised.

CALL YOUR SURGEON OR DOCTOR RIGHT AWAY IF YOU NOTICE

- Fever or chills
- Fluid or pus leaking from an incision
- Redness that spreads, or warm, hard swelling
- Pain, swelling or warmth in one calf or leg

Shortness of breath or chest pain: call 911 right away.

Please let me know too, so we can pause sessions until you're cleared.
