AFTERCARE

After Your Prenatal Massage

Pregnancy asks a lot of your body. These habits help you keep the ease from your session and know what to watch for.

YOUR LOGO

WHEN	WHAT'S NORMAL	DO	AVOID
Getting up right after	Feeling relaxed, sleepy or a little lightheaded as you sit up.	Roll to your side, push up slowly and sit a moment before standing.	Jumping up quickly, or driving if you feel dizzy.
Today first 24 hours	Mild tenderness in your back or hips, and feeling calm or tired.	Rest, sip water, have a snack. A warm, not hot, shower is lovely.	Hot tubs, saunas and very hot baths. Strenuous activity.
Tonight sleeping	Settling may feel easier. Some aches return as your baby moves.	Sleep on your side with a pillow between your knees and under your bump.	Lying flat on your back for long stretches after about 20 weeks.
Ongoing between visits	Aches shift as your bump grows. That is very common.	Gentle walks and stretches your provider approves. Rebook in [2–4] weeks.	Deep rubbing or massagers on your calves or inner legs.

Your provider Mention your massage at prenatal visits, and tell me about any new diagnosis.

After baby Postpartum massage is welcome when you feel ready. After a C-section, wait for your provider's OK, usually around [6] weeks.

Side sleep
Pillows under your bump and between your knees.

Sip water
Keep a bottle nearby for comfort through the day.

Move gently
Short, easy walks ease stiffness.

Feet up
Rest with your feet raised when ankles swell.

CALL YOUR PROVIDER RIGHT AWAY IF YOU NOTICE

- Vaginal bleeding or fluid leaking
- A severe headache or changes in vision
- Pain, warmth or swelling in one calf
- Regular contractions or cramping
- Sudden swelling of your face or hands
- Your baby moving less than usual

Then let me know, so I can adjust or pause your sessions.

Chest pain, trouble breathing or fainting: call 911.

WEEKS TODAY _____ POSITION THAT FELT BEST _____ YOUR NEXT VISIT _____