AFTERCARE

Caring for Your Extensions

Your extensions are attached to your own hair, so caring for one protects the other. A few simple habits keep them smooth, comfortable and lasting until your next move-up.

YOUR LOGO

WHEN	WHAT'S NORMAL	DO	AVOID
48 hours settling in	A snug, slightly tender scalp. Sleeping may feel different for a night or two.	Brush gently from the ends up. Sleep in a loose braid or low ponytail on silk.	Washing for [48] hours while bonds set. Heat, steam and heavy sweat.
Daily care every day	Some shedding collects at the attachments. Brushing keeps roots tidy.	Loop brush 2 to 3 times a day. Dry roots fully. Use a heat protectant.	Oils or conditioner on bonds. Sleeping wet. Unprotected chlorine or salt water.
Weeks 6–8 move-up time	Attachments sit lower as your hair grows. Roots may start to tangle more easily.	Book your move-up. Come with clean, dry hair and no product at the roots.	Stretching past [8] weeks. Adjusting tapes, bonds or beads yourself.
Removal when it's time	A small ball of shed hair at each attachment. This built up over weeks.	Book a professional removal. Let me check your scalp and deep condition after.	Pulling, cutting or dissolving extensions at home. Box dye on extension hair.

Shedding

Everyone sheds about 50 to 100 hairs a day. With extensions, those hairs stay at the attachment until your move-up, so a little build-up is normal.

Swimming

Wet hair first, add a leave-in, braid it and wear a cap. Rinse right after.

Brush gently

Start at the ends and work up, holding the roots.

Dry the roots

Damp attachments mat and slip. Never sleep wet.

Keep bonds clean

Conditioner and oils go mid-lengths to ends only.

Braid for bed

A loose braid and silk scarf stop tangles overnight.

CALL ME RIGHT AWAY IF YOU NOTICE

- Itching, soreness or pulling that won't settle
- Headaches that started after your install
- Bumps, redness or a rash at the attachments
- Shedding at the root or thin, bare spots

I can loosen or remove pieces that pull. For a rash or bare patches, see your doctor or a dermatologist too.

Face or throat swelling or trouble breathing: call 911.
